according to subject rather than title, said Mark Grover, reserve librarian. The new method will save time for students working on research, he said, because they can find all of the magazines dealing with their subject easily and quickly.

Special directories scattered throughout the section, giving the call numbers for magazines, will help students looking for a specific periodical, Grover said.

Heavily read magazines such as Time, Newsweek, Ensign and Sports Illustrated, as well as newspapers and college catalogues will be located in a special display area at the front of the periodical section, explained Grover.

Nelson said the university was fortunate enough to have a construction company willing to work around the students and allow the students to use the library. Under its contract, the company did not have to open the library addition until the latter part of November, Nelson said.

Without this cooperation, we'd be in a pickle," he said.

According to the construction company, work left to be done on the outside of the building includes putting precast stone slabs on the walls, waterproofing the earth side, placing granite topping slabs, pouring the cement sidewalks and adding steelreinforcements to the steps.

Many areas inside the library are open even though work continues to go on. The Learning Resources Center is in operation, but many of the TV consoles have not been installed and wired by electricians, Nelson said.

The service tunnel which allows trucks to make deliveries and pickups without interrupting the student traffic flow is also in operation, he said.

Gov. Calvin L. Rampton ... to speak today

Officials warn against U.S. bond chain letters

Because of a possible connection between the purchasing of U.S. Savings Bonds and a chainletter scheme, a warning has been issued by the Utah State Attorney General's Office.

Chain letter schemes using savings bonds are a class A misdemeanor under Utah's Consumer Sales Practice Act, according to a spokesman for the Consumer Protection Division of the Utah State Attorney General's Office.

Moreover, if these schemes use the mails in any way, they violate postal lottery and fraud laws.

Utah residents were warned in April by Jesse L. Adams, deputy national director, U.S. Savings Bonds Division, Department of the Treasury, not to become involved in chain letter or similar schemes using savings bonds.

During late August and early September, several BYU students investigated or asked to purchase U.S. Savings Bonds at Zions First National Bank, said Merrill Riggs, assistant director of operations at Zions Bank. During the last week, there have been a

Forum taps British solon

A member of British Parliament will discuss at Tuesday's forum assembly, why he believes liberty is being threatened in Great Britain.

Dr. Rhodes Boyson, widely recognized as a historian and philosopher will speak at 10 a.m. Tuesday in the Marriott Center. He will attempt to show how Britain's experiences may be used by the United States government in making future decisions.

In his address, he will discuss the failure of socialism and the welfare state within Britain, and also show the dangers of an absolute democracy.

Rampton will speak

Gov. Calvin L. Rampton will kick off Political Involvement Week '76 today at 4 p.m. in the de Jong Concert Hall, according to Joe Watkins, co-chairman of the event.

Political Involvement '76 is being sponsored by the ASBYU Academics Office, Watkins said. Gov. Rampton will speak on the "Value of Citizenship."

Political Involvement Week '76 will continue through next Friday. Sen. Frank Moss will speak Thursday at 4 p.m. in the Main Ballroom ELWC and Rep. Gunn McKay will speak next Friday at 4 p.m. in the ballroom. Other speakers will be featured throughout the week.

New tax measure cuts Ford OK

By the Associated Press

WASHINGTON (AP) — Congress completed action Thursday on a bill that continues present individual and business tax cuts through 1977 and makes the most sweeping changes in tax laws in 20 years.

The bill, which would affect every American taxpayer, now goes to President Ford. He has given no indication that he will veto it.

Final approval of the measure, more than two years in the making, came after the House rejected, 229 to 181, an effort by Republicans to kill a provision that eventually would raise taxes on inherited property.

The legislation then won House approval and was quickly approved by the Senate, 86 to 2.

In separate action, the Senate voted for the second time to allow college or vocational students or their parents a tax credit of up to $250 a year to offset tuition and other education costs.

That provision will have to be considered by the House separately from the overall tax bill.

Senate Finance Committee Chairman Russell B. Long, D-La., predicted the measure would be accepted by the House.

However, in working out differences between Senate and House versions of a major tax revision bill last week, House conferees insisted that an identical tuition credit previously approved by the Senate be dropped and considered later by itself.

In the House, meanwhile, Republican critics of a step to increase taxes on property heirs were waging a last-ditch fight before a final vote on the major tax bill approved by congressional conferees.

House approval of the tax bill would send the wide-ranging measure to the Senate for final congressional approval and on to President Ford.

The most important part of the tax bill would extend for another 18 months the package of antirecession tax cuts enacted last year.

Without the extension, a typical family of four earning $6,000 a year would face a tax hike of $445 a year. For a family of four earning $15,000, taxes would go up $180 a year. A single person earning $8,000 would pay $182 more. A couple earning $10,000 would face a $204 tax increase.

But some of the other changes made by the bill could mean even more tax savings for various groups of taxpayers.

For example, parents who have to hire baby-sitters to take care of their kids could have their tax bills cut by as much as $800 a year. Many housewives could qualify for the first time for tax-deferred pension plans.

The highly complex retirement-income credit would be replaced by a more generous, simpler credit that would allow elderly persons to cut their taxes by up to $375 a year. The present sick-pay provisions would be eliminated entirely except for persons under 65 who retired with a total, permanent disability.

Persons who are accustomed to taking a tax deduction for doing business in their homes or renting out their vacation homes might find their tax benefits reduced.

The federal inheritance taxes would be overhauled and reduced by raising the portion of estates exempt from the tax. Generally, estates worth up to $25,000 would be tax-free if passed on to the surviving spouse. The changes would be of special help to family-owned farms and businesses.

Grads for fall must file now

Today is the last day that graduation applications for students planning for December graduation.

Gene F. Priddy, assistant registrar for graduation, said students seeking bachelor or associate degrees may pick up the application forms in their college advisement centers. These forms must be turned into the Cashier's Office ASB no later than 4:30 p.m. today. A $6 fee for an associate degree or a $12 fee for a bachelor degree must accompany the application, Priddy said.

Priddy also said Nov. 12 is the deadline to have incompletes, special exams, military credit or official transcripts from other schools processed.

Exec council approves $609 cut in UIA budget

The ASBYU Executive Council approved an amendment to the Utah Intercollegiate Assembly (UIA) budget in its meeting Thursday morning.

Sterling Jensen, vice president of finance, revised the UIA budget, reducing it $609. The council approved the amendment by a vote of seven to three.

The new UIA budget will require members of the BYU delegation to pay about $25 of their own expenses while attending the UIA session in November.

Thirty-two BYU students were selected as UIA interns last week. Many of them will attend the UIA legislative session in November, which will pass resolutions to the Utah State Legislature for consideration.

The approved UIA budget will pay for each delegate's tuition and travel expenses, but will cover only part of their hotel and food expenses.

The council also passed a resolution to address a letter to Dorothy Benham, the new Miss America, to show its support of her stand on premarital sex, abortion and women's liberation. The idea for the letter came at the suggestion of Pres. Dallin Oaks.

The Council also approved three more members of the ASBYU judiciary.

June Babiracki was approved as student defender and DaVon Tau and John Gibbons were approved as common court justices.

ASBYU Pres. Randy Sloat announced that ASBYU officers will be organizing October visits to the on-campus housing areas to meet with students.

Executive Council meetings are held each week from 10 a.m. to noon in 388 ELWC and are open to students.

Pacific Isles new site Russ-West match?

THOMAS KENT
United Press Wire

(AP) — The remote, isolated South Pacific islands since the end of World War II have become the scene of a match between the United States and the West, Western nations.

has sprouted only in the Pacific, involves alleged Soviet cooperation in fishing, favor with new nations giving them diplomatic recognition, and discussing economic aid.

are say the Soviet Union is cooperating in fishing the countries, including their fishing ports, but not in any economic aid.

involved in the current young, and the Soviet diplomatic relations with Tonga and Fiji both ended in 1970. Western nations have traditionally favored Australia, New Zealand and Papua New Guinea.

1975. Nations have traditionally favored Australia, New Zealand and Papua New Guinea.

States. Sea routes between Western powers run through the Pacific.

States decided last year to head off the Russians. But in Moscow, the Russians claim they are up to nothing sinister.

"It turns out," Ivestia declared sarcastically in a front-page editorial a few weeks ago, "the 'Soviet danger' in the Pacific Ocean comes down to the establishment and development of normal relations between the Soviet Union and independent Pacific Ocean states."

For good measure, Ivestia blasted the United States for not granting independence to the Micronesian islands and for allegedly "militarizing" the Pacific Ocean the same way it has built up naval strength in the Indian Ocean.

Western powers began worrying about Soviet intentions this year when the Soviet ambassador to New Zealand traveled to Tonga in May to present his credentials and a Soviet deputy fishing minister visited Samoa and Tonga in July.

Diplomats reported that the Russians offered to build an international airport in Tonga, a good way for the country to attract more tourists, in return for the opening of port facilities to Russian fishing boats.

The Soviet Union has already done hydrographic surveys of the South Pacific and Russian fishermen, pressed by heavy demands for fish in the 1976-80 five-year plan, have shown increasing interest in the region's tropical fish.

The Soviet Foreign Ministry would not comment on Soviet plans in the region.

Whatever the Russians' intentions for the area may be, some Westerners believe that the island nations will turn the big-power rivalry to their advantage. Since the total population of Fiji, Western Samoa, Tonga and Papua New Guinea is only 3.3 million people, any additional economic aid that can be extracted from either side will go far.

"There is a certain amount of playing-off among the countries to see if they can draw a slightly higher card from someone else," one Western diplomat in Moscow admitted. He noted unemployment and agricultural problems on some of the islands that would make them receptive to any offer.

Meanwhile, the war of words and aid packages continue. The possibility of a Soviet threat in the South Pacific has become an internal political issue in Australia and New Zealand and within Anzus — the defense alliance of Australia, New Zealand and the United States. It was through Anzus that the three countries decided in August to increase financial aid to the area.

Rush on vaccine could limit shots

ATLANTA (AP) — "Roll Up Your Sleeve, America" is the theme of a national campaign to get Americans to line up for swine flu shots. But if everyone rolls up when the shots first become available, there won't be enough vaccine to inoculate them.

The public awareness campaign sponsored by the federal Center for Disease Control and the National Medical Audio Visual will be presented in radio and television spots, newspaper and magazine ads and other materials. There is no plan to buy national advertising for the campaign.

"The thrust of the campaign is that flu is a serious disease, that it is preventable, that we have a good vaccine and you should protect yourself," CDC spokesman Stafford Smith said Wednesday night.

President Ford had been pushing to have all Americans inoculated against the viral infection by fall. But there will not be enough vaccine available if every American wants to be inoculated when the shots first become available in October. Delays in producing the vaccine have been caused by doubts about its reliability and insurance problems.

Federal officials expect to deliver more than 20 million doses of the vaccine by Oct. 1 to state health departments, an additional 97 million doses by December, and 130 million doses by January.

Because there are questions about the effectiveness of the vaccine in children under age 18, vaccinations are planned only for adults.

A CDC nationwide poll found that 93 per cent of those questioned know about swine flu; 53 per cent have decided to take the swine flu shot; 13 per cent have decided to refuse the voluntary shots, and 34 per cent were undecided.

Projected on a nationwide scale, if all the undecided elect to get shots, that will make 143 million people, about 10 million more than the number of doses expected to be on hand by January.

"Those are projections, and there may be more vaccine than that," CDC spokesman Don Berreth said.

"Things are behind schedule, but a lot of work is being done to catch up," Smith said.

Nurse slayer will seek parole grant each year

JOLIET, Ill. (AP) — Convicted mass murderer Richard Speck, denied parole in his first try, will get another hearing next year and every year thereafter.

Speck, convicted in 1967 of killing eight student nurses, was brought before a parole board Wednesday, but it refused to release him from Stateville Penitentiary. "Any other action by the board would promote disrespect for the law," said chairman Peter A. Kotsos.

Kotsos and the two other board members deliberated for only five minutes.

Illinois law grants Speck annual parole hearings in the future.

Kotsos said Speck, 34, expected the decision. "He told us he is purchasing lawbooks and reviewing them in order to effect his own release," the chairman said.

He said Speck, meeting in private with the board before the open hearing, "showed no remorse during the questioning... and maintained his innocence."

Officials said that in the several weeks since it became public known that Speck was eligible for parole, 3,000 letters urged that he be kept behind bars.

Some relatives of the dead nurses appeared at Wednesday's hearing.

An attorney for some of the families of the nurses said Speck "is a fiend and spawned in hell."

Speck was originally sentenced to the electric chair, but he was saved from death when the U.S. Supreme Court ruled that capital punishment as provided for by most states was unconstitutional. He now is serving consecutive sentences totaling 400 to 1,200 years.

Mansfield leaves

By RICHARD CARELLI
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Senate Majority Leader Mike Mansfield, a gentle scholar who wastes no words but whose words have influenced more than three decades of U.S. history, spent his last day in the Senate Thursday.

The 73-year-old Montana Democrat, who earlier this year decided not to seek re-election, is traveling to the People's Republic of China and won't return before the Oct. 2 end of the congressional session.

Mansfield, an acknowledged authority on Far Eastern affairs who, once taught the subject, and Sen. John Glenn, D-Ohio, are traveling together for what Mansfield described as a work-and-study session.

In customary fashion, Mansfield has said little about his departure from the Senate floor, his place of business since 1953. But when coaxed by interviewers, he has obligingly discussed the most memorable successes and failures of Congress since he arrived as a House freshman in 1943.

He has talked about gaining the vote for 18-year-olds, the Senate's investigation into Watergate, creation of an intelligence oversight committee in the Senate and the joy of saving a Montana lake, Flathead.

And about the tragedy of Vietnam, Cambodia and Laos.

In a letter to President Ford shortly after his decision to leave public office, Mansfield wrote in part:

"My years in the Congress encompass one-sixth of the nation's history since independence; the administrations of seven presidents, the assassination of a president and other extreme outrages against human decency; able political leaderships and seamy politics and chicanery;

the dawn of the nuclear age and men on the moon; a great war and a prelude of more wars and an uneasy peace. ... I ask now that this trust be shifted to other shoulders."

His 16 years as party leader in the Senate exceeded by no man, Mansfield always appeared an unlikely choice for such longevity in a rough-and-tumble business.

Unlike his predecessor as majority leader, Lyndon B. Johnson, Mansfield eschewed arm-twisting pressure tactics against recalcitrant colleagues. "I wouldn't know how," he once said.

But more than one senator admitted being influenced by what was called Mansfield's "high-pitched voice of reason."

Mansfield was elected as assistant Democratic leader of the Senate — majority whip — in 1957 and as majority leader in 1961 when Johnson was elected vice president.

Relatives file agreement to split Hughes fortune

HOUSTON (AP) — An agreement that splits the Howard Hughes estate among 20 Hughes relatives in the event no valid will is found has been filed in probate court here.

Under the agreement filed Wednesday with Harris County Probate Judge Pat Gregory, 25 per cent of the estimated $2.5 billion estate would go to Mrs. Annette Gammo Lummus of Houston, an aunt who is temporary co-administrator of the estate.

One half of the estate would be shared by 16 maternal heirs and one fourth would be shared by three paternal first cousins.

A similar document was filed last month in a Las Vegas, Nev. court that also is involved in the controversy over the estate of the billionaire recluse who died April 5.

Gregory also received Wednesday reports from attorneys detailing schedules for their preparations for a Houston trial to determine the legal residence of Hughes.

Attorneys filed a list of names of persons from whom they want to take depositions. These included Hughes' former wife, Joan Peters Hough of Los Angeles, and Mrs. Lummus and William Lummus of Houston.

Lummus recently was elected chairman of the board of Summa Corp., the holding company that controls most of Hughes' fortune.

Texas Atty. Gen. John H. Lee indicated he would be ready for a Dec. 6 trial, but Harold Rhoden, attorney for Noah Dietrich of Las Angeles, a former Hughes aide, said discovery of evidence would take more than a year.

A purported will found in the Mormon Church headquarters building in Salt Lake City in April names Dietrich as executor of the estate.

Police take false sniper

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — When reports of shots fired from the ninth floor of a hotel overlooking a major traffic artery cracked over the sheriff's radio at rush hour Wednesday, two dozen Jefferson Parish officers converged on the suburban Gateway Hotel.

They found William Lackey, 33, of Boise, Idaho, in his ninth-floor room tossing firecrackers out the window, deputies said.

Officers said Lackey was booked with criminal mischief.

Citicorp plans to create folksy, yet global image

NEW YORK (AP) — How does a $59-billion financial corporation project an image that's both global and folksy?

Simple, say officials of Citicorp, better known as First National City Bank. Build the most super supermarket in the world, put your new 46-story headquarters on stilts over it and appeal to what New Yorkers like to do most.

Besides being good community relations, executive vice president Thomas F. Creamer, Citicorp, says he expects The Market, as it has been billed, to be profitable. He also says that by mid-October Citicorp Center will be completely rented at rates ranging from $16 to $18 a square foot.

"We went after tenants who don't advertise," he said, "prestigious law or accounting firms."

Original plans called for the building to get its heat from the sun. Its intricately angled roof is still a gigantic sun-trap.

"But we commissioned a $150,000 survey by the Massachusetts Institute of Technology," said Arthur

Gold medalist goes pro

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Dorothy Hamill, the 20-year-old ice skater who won the hearts of Americans and an Olympic gold medal, has begun a new career as a professional with the Ice Capades.

"Before the Olympics, it was all just for one night," said the 5-foot-3, 110-pound Connecticut native.

"It's such a relief to have joined the Ice Capades. After years in different houses, with different tutors, coaches, teachers and choreographers... now it's just one suitcase, to the rink and back to the hotel room. Believe me, that's settling down."

Driscoll, vice president in charge of The Market. "And they told us the technique was not advanced enough yet. So we've built the basics and will convert when technology catches up."

Michael Buckley of Halcyon Ltd., which has offices in Hartford, Conn., and Montreal, and George Lang, a food consultant whose projects are as global as Citicorp's, were brought in to implement plans for The Market.

Buckley said the company "had to appeal to the local community."

"What do New Yorkers like to do most? Eat, and especially eat international or ethnic foods. That's what The Market's all about."

The Market, whose varied mixture of eating places will include French, Italian, Chinese, Japanese, German, Scandinavian and you-name-it restaurants, retail food stores and delicatessens, centers on a 1.3-million-square-foot plaza.

Columns soar 112 feet so that the first floor of the office building is actually the 14th floor.

The whole thing covers the city block between Lexington and Third avenues from 53rd to 54th Street.

One reason Citicorp expects to make a profit is that it's in the middle of the world's richest shopping district. Some 6,000 persons with median family incomes over $25,000 a year live within an eight-minute walk.

Million-mile

heads home

SALT LAKE CITY

(AP) — Million-mile Sam, who has traveled 75,000 miles by bus and train so far this year, passed through Utah en route back home to Brooklyn.

Sam Brooks, 66, has been traveling since he retired 20 years ago and is shooting to be proclaimed the world's champion bus and train rider by the Guinness Book of World Records.

The retired mailman says, "When I worked, I used to read every postmark. I wanted to go everywhere."

He arrived from San Francisco at 11:30 a.m. Wednesday and planned to catch another bus eastward at 4 p.m.

Train travel

Brooks says he traveled 16,000 miles by passenger trains one month earlier this year, but found it too expensive and went back to buses.

He figures he has traveled more than 1 million miles during his life, including taking the subway to work.

He started his cross-country trips at 17 when he hopped freight trains from New York to Kansas City and back. He figures that as a mailman he walked 13 miles a day for 28 years.

Enjoys publicity

Brooks also enjoys the publicity, and stops off at newspapers along the way. He says he sometimes also visits television stations, even though it makes him nervous to be interviewed in front of cameras.

Brooks wrote the Guinness companies in England that his 23,000-mile trip from last Jan. 17 to March 17 broke the 17,000-mile record held by an English woman.

Keeps a log

The firm wrote back in August it needed independent corroboration, such as a detailed log. Since then, he's been keeping logs of the trips.

It's school again for 93-year-old

MANSFIELD, Ohio (AP) — Charles Wagner, 93, has so far taken six courses at the Mansfield campus of Ohio State University in a program that allows people 65 or older to audit courses without charge.

Do you really know what happens when business profits go up or down?

If we citizens don't understand the basic workings of our American Economic System, how can we make intelligent decisions about it? Every American ought to know what this booklet says. It's easy to read, interesting—and free. For a copy, write: "Economics," Pueblo, Colorado 81009.

Hotel life in the '30s not all bad for actor

A few years ago Kay Thompson wrote a book about "Eloise," a mythical child who lived in a New York hotel. There was a real-life counterpart of Eloise in Los Angeles and his name was -- and is -- Richard Crenna, now starring in "All's Fair," Monday night at 8:30 on the CBS Television Network.

Growing up in downtown Los Angeles during the 1930s depression years, Crenna met enough real-life "characters" to make a casting director weep with envy. His parents owned and managed a series of small residential hotels and Crenna's back yard was the hotel lobby.

Looking back on it, Crenna says he is amazed he was able to turn out on the right side of the law. "They say that if you bring up a kid in a certain environment he'll turn out that way," Crenna says. "In that case I should be a gambler, an alcoholic, a thief, a tout, bookie or pimp because that's what most of the hotel residents were in those days."

From the age of 11 when he made his radio debut as an actor, Crenna spent most of his childhood riding streetcars to work in the fantasy-land of network radio, then home again to the Runyonesque world of his parents' hotel.

Crenna has no regrets. "For a kid with a tremendous curiosity about people, it was great to grow up in the middle of the city and meet this great cross-section of humanity, who seem to huddle in the downtown areas of cities."

"Going to school downtown meant mixing with all types of kids and all races," Crenna recalls, "and we all got along beautifully. I don't ever remember being aware that there was supposed to be much of a difference between us."

"If anything," Crenna adds, "I guess I was the minority. Most of the kids I went to school with were black, Mexican or Oriental."

In high school during the early years of World War II, Crenna says he will never forget the day when the Japanese kids in his school, including the class president, were being taken out of school and shipped to detention camps.

"The rest of us really took that hard," Crenna remembers. "We had all grown up together and we couldn't understand why these kids were being singled out for this humiliation."

The two or three hotels Crenna grew up in were filled with strange, but interesting types. He remembers being taught to fight by ex-boxers, taught to play cards by an ex-card shark on a gambling ship, and learning all about shoplifting (but having the sense not to put the information to use).

He also remembers the time a famous gangland figure was murdered. The next day 70 of the hotel's 74 rooms were empty. "That gives you an idea of our clientele in that hotel," Crenna laughs.

And how has Crenna's childhood affected how he raises his own children? Well, they've done a lot of living in a lot of hotels, not in downtown Los Angeles, but in hotels all over the world. Crenna and his wife, Penni, have taken their children with them wherever they went on movie-making location trips.

"They have a lot of knowledge I didn't have at their age," Crenna admits, "but if they ever want to know how to steal a canoe out of Abercrombie & Fitch, they'll still have to come to their old man!"

Rock stars to host show

Marty Balin, George Benson, the Beach Boys, the Captain and Tennille, Harry Chapin, Peter Frampton, Jermaine Jackson, Jefferson Starship, Tony Orlando, Grace Slick, Rod Stewart and Paul Williams will perform or serve as presenters on the second annual "Rock Music Awards" special to be broadcast Saturday at 9 p.m. on CBS.

Additional performers and presenters will also be on hand. The awards ceremony, to be co-hosted by Diana Ross and Alice Cooper, will be broadcast from the Hollywood Palladium.

Last year's event, at which 16 "Rocky" medallions were presented in as many categories, marked the first formal recognition of the progressive rock music industry in primetime television. The ceremony is now an annual event.

Y radio employees get prize

Two KBYU-FM employees had winning craft and hobby entries in the Utah State Fair in August.

Lee Scanlon, program manager and Dennis Campbell, chief announcer, received red and blue ribbons respectively for their entries at the fair in Salt Lake City.

Scanlon took a second place award in stamp collecting while Campbell received a first place ribbon for his handmade classical guitar.

"I was very pleased. It was the first time I've ever entered a collection," said Scanlon, referring to his entry of Japanese stamps which was described by some at the fair as the most valuable frame of stamps at the exhibit. "My wife helped me--we both had fun putting it together."

He said that the award came as quite a surprise. "When I entered it, third place was a dream but second place was beyond all expectation."

aneous shows will be presented in the Art Gallery, HFAC, at BYU Monday be drawings and wood carvings made d by Dr. J. Roman Andrus, professor emeritus of art and education; a group of western paintings by William F. Whitaker Jr., assistant professor of art; a show of restored antique cars by Glen H. Turner, professor of art; and a show of antique cars from the Bullock and Losee Jewelers Collection.

Movies planned

In conjunction with the exhibit, motion pictures about old cars and their restoration will be shown on Oct. 7 at 8 p.m. in the Secured Gallery, HFAC. Admission will be free.

Dr. Andrus, who served for six years as chairman of the BYU Art Department, has exhibited from coast to coast, including the Boston Museum and the Los Angeles Museum. He has received numerous prizes at state fairs, the Utah State Institute of Fine Arts and Springfield National Arts Exhibit. He and Mrs. Andrus just returned from a temple mission to New Zealand, where he made the present paintings and carvings.

Western paintings

Whitaker, who joined the BYU faculty in 1969, has exhibited mainly in the West. He won a gold medal in the National Academy of Western Art Show in Oklahoma City at the Cowboy Hall of Fame. His work also has appeared in a number of magazines.

This 1929 LaSalle was restored by Glen Turner. It will be displayed as part of the art shows beginning Monday.

Turner, an art professor, restores old cars and motorcycles as a hobby. Included in his show will be a 1917 Henderson Motorcycle, 1917 Dodge Roadster, 1926 Model T Ford, 1929 LaSalle, and others.

The Bullock and Losee car collection includes classics such as a 1935 Mercedes-Benz, one of the 18 luxury parade cars built for high officials of Hitler's Third Reich. There will also be a 1920 Silver Ghost Rolls Royce, a yellow Stutz Bearcat, and several of the finest exotic sports cars ever built; a 1971 Maserati spider, a 1971 Lamborghini Muray style, a 1963 Maserati birdcage, and others.

'Discovery' for talented uphill climb, says actress

"I believe that there are thousands of very talented people who never become famous, for a lot of different reasons," speculates Linda Lavin, who stars as Alice Hyatt, an aspiring singer who works as a waitress, in "Alice," the new half-hour comedy series to premiere Sept. 29 at 8:30 p.m. on the CBS Television Network.

"There are many reasons why a person with talent and a dream of success is never 'discovered,'" the dark-haired actress continues. "It could be due to circumstances, the person's own attitude, or just dumb luck. But I think that if a person isn't famous for his talent, it doesn't necessarily mean he's not good at it."

In addition to having recorded the "Alice" theme song for the new series, Miss Lavin may be seen, as Alice, singing in a small club from time to time. "I'll sing as well as I can, because Alice is a good singer. She's one of those people who have talent, even if no one outside her friends ever knows it."

The actress, in fact, lends Alice a considerable talent. Miss Lavin starred in Broadway musicals including "It's a Bird, It's a Plane, It's Superman," in which she sang the hit song "You've Got Possibilities." She also starred with Van Johnson in the national company of "On a Clear Day You Can See Forever."

"I was singing from the crib, even before I could talk," Miss Lavin relates with a laugh, "or so I'm told. I guess everyone thought it was cute, so I kept it up." Her mother, a professional singer who worked in radio and early live television, was also trained in opera, and passed along some of this training to her daughter.

"My early experiences with music definitely helped me decide to become an actress," Miss Lavin asserts. "The love of performing, whether it's music or a dramatic role, is what it's all about."

New drama series premieres Monday

The "they" who direct big business from paneled conference rooms and the workers they direct are the important characters in a compelling new continuing drama, "Executive Suite," which premieres Monday at 9 p.m. on the CBS Television Network.

But more than that, it will show the personal as well as the professional pressures that affect bosses and bosses alike. So stories will involve wives, sweethearts, friends and associates both inside and outside the corporate boardroom.

Stories will develop in a variety of ways and on different levels—white collar and blue, family and business, male and female.

Producer Don Brinkley envisions the series as showing how an individual's work consumes a major portion of his life and how his emotional status—as determined by his personal life—influences his professional behavior.

"We'll have as many as nine separate stories running at one time," said Brinkley. "It will be like life, where people operate on many different levels. Each episode will tell a story but there will be continuing developments."

The series is based on the Cameron Hawley novel, which was seen in a 1954 film version. Norman Felton and Stanley Rubin are executive producers for Stanley Rubin/Arena Productions, Inc., in association with MGM Television.

Youth film

to be aired

Saturday

"Charlie the Rascal," a film from Sweden about a young boy from Stockholm who learns to channel his mischief toward constructive results, will be broadcast on "The CBS Children's Film Festival," Saturday at noon.

The title character is the constant torment of his south side Stockholm neighborhood where he lives with his mother and older sister during the 1930s.

When an untrustworthy real estate developer attempts to buy out his family and the other tenants of his old building for an unjustly low price, Charlie turns from his devilish pranks to give the developer a taste of his own medicine and get a fair price for the property.

Farm family hosts candidate in South Dakota political rally

HARTFORD, S.D. (AP) — Things were back to normal on the Francis Sieverding farm today. There were no more politicians in the machine shed, no more film crews in the pig pen.

"It's deadlier than a doornail around here," said Sieverding, shortly after he hosted Democratic presidential candidate Jimmy Carter, state politicians, Secret Service agents and national and local reporters.

Sieverding, in blue jeans, yellow sweat shirt and boots, and Carter, in suit and tie, toured the farmyard Wednesday morning. It was part of a campaign appearance and rally in Sioux Falls for Carter, who used the opportunity to attack the Ford administration's farm policies from atop a hayrack.

"If it weren't for my family, I don't think I would have gone along with the idea," said Sieverding, a father of six. His 675-acre farm is in the heart of South Dakota's corn and soybean land, where a drought has left the area 10 inches short of normal rainfall.

"I was a little skeptical about having a crowd on the farm. It doesn't take much to spook a feedlot full of cattle," he said.

The family made no special preparations for the visit. "We cleaned the place up a little bit, and delayed the chores, but that was all," said Sieverding, who has been on the farm since 1955.

Things went smoothly and it was all over in less than an hour.

Much of the tour was filled with typical farm conversation.

"Anybody using Hampshires up here?" Carter asked as they checked Sieverding's brood sows. "Do you grind your own feed?" "Any of your sons interested in farming?"

"I felt he had a genuine interest," said Sieverding, who said he has never taken an active part in the Democratic party, other than voting in primaries and elections.

Led 'spartan' life Guards laud Mao

TOKYO (AP) — The soldiers who once guarded Chinese Communist party Chairman Mao Tse-tung say he led a spartan personal life and instructed them "not to waste a drop of water, a grain of rice or the smallest amount of electric power."

The report said Mao refused to eat meat or drink tea during "the three years of temporary difficulties in our national economy (1959-1961)."

Mao's body now lies in state in the Great Hall of the People in Peking. Hundreds of thousands of Chinese have filed past the bier, many weeping openly, to pay their respects. A memorial gathering is set for Saturday.

The Chinese news agency Hsinhua carried an article titled "Chairman Mao, We Will Remember You Always." Hsinhua said part of the article was written by men of the People's Liberation Army who guarded Mao's house in Peking.

Schools begin sessions following Teton disaster

REXBURG, Idaho (AP) — Schools opened for the first time Wednesday in Idaho's Madison School District 321 after more than three weeks delay due to the Teton Dam disaster June 5.

The high school and all elementary schools opened their doors, except Washington Elementary School, which will open Thursday.

The junior high school in the district will not open until after potato harvest vacation, about the middle of October.

The junior high was one of the schools hardest hit by the flood caused when the dam collapsed.

About $1.5 million has been poured into the district by the federal government to help with repairs.

About 2,700 students have been affected by the delay.

Meanwhile, about 760 students in the Sugar-Salem school district will be out until Oct. 11. They had been scheduled to go to class this Monday.

The decision was made Tuesday night at the school board meeting, in which school District Supt. Tom Kershaw said the board discussed the various options in detail.

Several factors have caused the delay for Sugar-Salem's opening. Water to the schools has not yet been approved as safe by the health department.

Much of the furniture has not yet arrived, heating units have not been installed and miscellaneous other matters must be taken care of before schools open.

Teton Dam location wrong

LS, Idaho (AP) — Water pressure on Dam may have caused structures to deform, allowing seepage that led the dam to give way, two geologists on a panel investigating the Teton Dam geology professor at the University of Idaho, said Wednesday. The panel has allowed "plastic deformation" of the dam, causing the dam to slowly slip at the abutment.

The two geologists said compressible rock and clay formations underlie the earthen dam. They said the heavy dam, with 80 billion gallons of water behind it, could compress the rock to allow water to seep through between the embankment and the rock abutment.

Both men said that if their theory is correct a dam should never have been built at the site.

About a third of the 307-foot-high earthen dam gave way at midday June 5, causing flooding downstream that took the lives of 11 persons and property damage estimated at $1 billion.

The government panel is meeting in Idaho Falls for two days to hear reports from the panel's subgroups and to plan future studies. The hearings conclude today.

Curry and Corbett were critical of the regional geology studies conducted before the dam was built. "The Bureau of Reclamation geologists were probably aware of the geology that had been done," Curry said. "The problem is, so little geology has been done. When there is as little information available as this, it should be clear that additional information should be obtained or geologists should get the point across that they don't know much about it."

Corbett said rapid filling of the reservoir could have contributed to the failure since stress on the dam was the result of reservoir filling, high runoff from melting snow and geologic features.

He said the "creeping-type" movement of the dam would have started when the reservoir began to fill. Curry said the dam would only have had to move "a few centimeters" for the dam to fail.

Name 'illegal' on ballot, Carter files suit in Maine

AUGUSTA, Maine (AP) — Democratic presidential candidate Jimmy Carter may not have too much of an identity problem with most of the country. But here in Maine, legally, candidate Jimmy Carter is a nobody.

And therein lie the seeds of a court suit.

Maine law requires that along with a candidate's first and last names, his middle name or a middle initial must be listed, if he has one. The state attorney general's office has held that Carter's legal name is James Earl Carter Jr. and that there has been no attempt to legally change that name.

Carter and the 1976 Democratic Presidential Campaign Committee brought suit against Maine's secretary of state last week to attempt to reverse the decision. Maine Secretary of State

Markham L. Gortley and Maine Atty. Gen. Joseph E. Brennan are both Democrats.

Carter aides say the case is the only dispute of its kind in the nation over the listing of their candidate on the Nov. 2 ballot.

At a hearing Wednesday, Nichols asked Deputy State Atty. Gen. Donald Alexander whether Maine law would have barred certain past presidents from appearing on the ballot as they were popularly known. He cited the given names of Thomas Woodrow Wilson and John Calvin Coolidge.

Club supports source privacy

BOISE, Idaho (AP) — The Idaho Press Club has unanimously passed a resolution supporting the Twin Falls Times-News in its effort to keep a news source confidential.

The newspaper has been ordered by District Court Judge Theron Ward to reveal the source of information which led to investigative news stories on operations of Sierra Life Insurance Co., Twin Falls.

Sierra Life has filed a libel suit against the newspaper, its publisher and editor and reporter Bill Lazarus.

At a Wednesday meeting the press club also voted to send $150 from the club treasury to the Twin Falls newspaper to assist in legal expense. Club president Mindy Cameron said the $150 is a symbolic gesture representing support of Idaho reporters for the newspaper.

"Clearly the Idaho Press Club believes in the right of a reporter to keep confidential sources of their information," Ms. Cameron said.

Y press open house

Writer advice planned

By TOM PRINCE
Universe Staff Writer

Amateur and accomplished writers with unpublished manuscripts will have an opportunity to have a professional appraisal of their work Thursday from noon to 6 p.m. in 347 ELWC at the BYU Press open house.

The open house, with the theme "May we IMPRESS you?" is designed to show students, faculty and area residents the full potential of BYU Press, according to Rick Bailey, advertising and promotion manager for BYU Press.

The main event, according to Bailey, will be consultation between the editorial department, headed by Gail W. Bell, and potential authors. "Potential authors means anyone who has written or wants to write," said Bailey.

The editors are looking for ideas, projects and manuscripts which are publishable, said Bailey. They will give candid reactions and advice. Topics such as royalties, print runs, how to promote and anything concerning publishing books can be discussed, Bailey explained.

Officers of the press and members of the Faculty Publications Committee will be on hand to greet special guests and students from 1-2 p.m., said Bailey. Eleven awards will be presented to outstanding authors of the last few years. Those attending will be able to meet authors like Ben Benson, Butch Cassidy's sister, Dan Thomas, a best selling author; Clinton Larson, poet-in-residence at BYU, and other BYU Press authors, Bailey said.

The BYU Press Marketing Department will show the booth it sends to major trade exhibits. The booth will include books and videotapes of TV appearances by recent authors, said Bailey. There will be a free pamphlet, "Author - Publisher, The Happy Combination," at the booth which will give the author detailed information on how to prepare a manuscript for publication at the BYU Press. Kenneth G. Trane, marketing manager for BYU Press, and Bailey, will be at the booth to answer questions.

An added attraction at the open house will be a display of award-winning books from the Association of American University Presses (AAUP), Bailey said. The traveling display, which features the best of university press publications of 1975-76, includes books from such presses as Yale, MIT, Princeton, California and others, he added. BYU Press was elected to the AAUP, a national organization, in 1975, and is the official host in this region for the display, said Bailey.

Cadet, convicted cheater, brings nightmare to family

By MALCOLM N. CARTER
Associated Press Writer

WEST ISLIP, N.Y. (AP) - From the time their only son was born, Kenneth and Ann Curley wanted him to be a West Pointer. They were not disappointed.

They wanted to savor his successes - the medals, the awards and the trophies. Again they were not disappointed.

They wanted him to be a leader at the top of his class. He was.

Now he is a convicted West Point cheater, and Ken and Ann Curley say it is the worst thing that's happened since they lost one of their five children to crib death syndrome.

The cheating charge has created what Mrs. Curley calls a "living nightmare" of recriminations from their family, pointed comments from friends and telephone calls from cranks.

The plaques on the walls of their modest Long Island home are a testament to the hopes they had - still have - for Kenneth Jr., a strapping lacrosse and football player whom all four service academics courted.

He was once among the most promising leaders at West Point and in line to become fourth-ranking cadet in the entire corps. Now he has a clouded future. His stripes are gone and his pride bruised. He was convicted in August by an officer board in West Point's cheating scandal.

He stood tearfully back among the plebes in the year's first parade, filled with the indignity of carrying a rifle. He said he should have been out front carrying the command, for unstinting praise and the top positions of responsibility had been his.

"It really hurts," Cadet Curley, 20, says, "it really destroyed me - all this for one damn writ."

The "writ," cadet slang for a test, was the homework assignment administered early last March to 823 members of the Class of 1977. Roughly a quarter of the class was accused of collaborating on it, and those accused say the number is but a tip of the iceberg.

They are scapegoats and should be punished less lightly than what amounts to a year's suspension, they say. The honor system, they contend, isn't working.

"I love the place, but you look at it now, there are so many problems up there and the institution won't face it," young Curley said, expressing his determination to graduate nonetheless. He is destined to do so, his family says.

While still hospitalized after his son's premature birth - he weighed three pounds then, compared with 156 now - Mrs. Curley happened to watch "The Long Gray Line" on television. Then and there, she said she decided: "This is where he was going to go."

The film was on several nights, and mother and father watched it at home. So it seemed natural enough that toy soldiers and tanks would grace his first Christmas. When the boy turned nine, the movie came on again and his father let him stay up for it.

"As long as I can remember from that time on, that's where I wanted to go," the cadet recalled, idly thumbing the 760-page transcript of his hearing by the board of officers that convicted him.

He was always a leader, his parents said. When the Curleys moved to this pleasant community on the south shore, neighboring children mostly fished for play. But soon they played baseball and war.

"He organized this block," beamed the trim mother of three other children. "They were his army."

At high school, where he graduated 161st out of 800, Curley was captain of his football and lacrosse teams. By the time he was in the 9th grade, his mother said, he was already getting calls from West Point.

Young Curley wanted to go there so much that he didn't even answer the letter when the Navy invited him on a recruitment trip to Annapolis.

He has excelled at West Point - seventh in his class of more than 800 in leadership, ninth in physical education, and picked to be executive officer in charge of summer training at the academy's Camp Buckner.

One-cent coin may disappear

WASHINGTON (AP) - Remember penny candy, the penny weight machine, penny parking meters and penny stocks? They're all gone, and the penny may soon be gone too.

Inflation has led most people to toss their pennies in jars or desk drawers, stuff them in piggy banks or let them mount up quietly in the cracks behind the sofa's cushion.

Because the truth is, a penny goes much farther today than it did just 10 years ago - you can carry one around for weeks and never find anything it will buy.

So a government-sponsored study is recommending that the U.S. Mint eliminate the one cent piece by 1980. The study, made for the government by Research Triangle Institute, says pennies are too expensive to make and, besides, since they are so hard to spend, people squirrel them away instead of spending them.

It also recommended replacing half dollars with a new, smaller 1 cent coin.

The mint and the Treasury Department plan to study the proposal.

The loss of the penny, a mainstay of the U.S. monetary system since its beginning, could be the cause of a major crisis in the English language.

Most references made to pennies these days are in conversations about the good old days of penny candy (which is now a nickel) or penny matches (now two cents), penny stocks (now extinct) or penny parking meters (museum pieces).

Without the penny, penny ante poker would become more expensive, maybe turning into nickel ante poker, and it would take at least a nickel for your thoughts.

And how about "nickel-wise and pound foolish." Or, for nickel-pinchers: "A nickel saved is a nickel earned."

A greater number of them should have this experience, Anderson said. "While other students offered additional change machinists or sandwich warmers, I think the burning desire of every first year law student is to obtain a clerkship, and this is the only issue which I have specifically addressed," Anderson said. The winner of today's election will become part of the 11-member board called the Board of Governors, Ralph Dewsnup, president of the Board, said. The function of the Board is to be the voice of the student body and to handle the suggestions, complaints and student events, added Dewsnup. The Board is comparable to the ASBYU officers, according to Dewsnup. Law school elections are conducted differently than ASBYU elections, Dewsnup said, because the "elections are held on the assumption that the students have neither great quantities of time or money." The election campaigns have been conducted this week and each candidate can spend $5 maximum on the primary or final election, Dewsnup said.

Danforth exam forms due

Students interested in the Danforth Fellowship need to register for the Graduate Record Exam by Monday. According to Dr. Terry Warner, dean of the College of General Studies, registration is needed to meet the deadline for the Oct. 16 exam. Late registrants will be charged $4 between Sept. 21-24, he said. The fellowship is for graduates who intend to teach on the college level and work on receiving a Ph.D. Dr. Warner said the scholarship provides tuition, fees, and a living stipend for the applicant and his dependents, if applicable. The scholarship is awarded on a one-year basis and is normally renewed each year for four years, according to performance the previous year. It is imperative that Danforth Fellowship hopefuls take the GRE on Oct. 16, since the exam on Dec. 11 will probably be too late to give them a fair chance, Dr. Warner said. Applications for the exam may be picked up in the Harold B. Lee Library testing center, he said. According to Dr. Warner, additional information concerning the GRE may be obtained from the Testing Center in the Lee Library. Details about the Danforth Fellowships may be obtained from the Honors Program secretary, also in the library.

Our Gang will sponsor midnight bowling party

Our Gang will sponsor a bowling party from midnight to 4 a.m. Saturday morning. Tickets are available at the third floor ticket office ELWC. Only 400 tickets are being sold for the event — 200 for men students and 200 for women students, a Social Office spokesman said. This policy is to insure equal odds and a chance for students to meet each other in a situation other than their branches, he added. Wolfman Jack from KEYY, a Provo radio station, will be the D.J. during the party and many other games will be free. Prizes will be awarded for those who get strikes when the blue pin is down during midnight bowling.

Hike-Bike to raise funds for mentally retarded

The second annual Hike-Bike will be held Sept. 25, starting at 9 a.m. The hike will start from two points, winding its way through a pre-selected path through Orem and Provo, according to Evelyn Fugate, chairman of the event. It is conducted as a fund-raising event yearly by the Utah County Association for Retarded Citizens.

About 200 participants are expected for the event which will start at the Provo Day Care Center, 800 N. 800 West, or the Orem High School, 175 S. 400 East in Orem.

Bikers and hikers will cover a 20-mile route. Sponsors will donate a certain amount of money for each mile traveled, Mrs. Fugate said.

Escape artist to appear at Concerts Impromptu

An escape artist, who will get out of a straight jacket while hanging from scaffolding in the ELWC Memorial Lounge, will be featured at Concerts Impromptu today at 8:30 p.m. Bryll Schultz, from Atwater, Calif., has been doing escape performances for 12 years, according to Jill Romney, chairman of Concerts Impromptu. Schultz is currently attending BYU and majoring in university studies. The two hour program will also include impromptu talent from other BYU students. To help insure quality performances, each performer has been interviewed by the Cultural Office, according to Miss Romney. Concert participants were selected on the basis of experience and type of act but were not required to audition.

"The Concerts Impromptu program is a service to performers who want experience," said Miss Romney. "It also provides free entertainment to the students." Miss Romney explained that the concerts, which will be held each Friday at 8:30 p.m., will regularly include one or two feature artists, who are often professionals. Students interested in performing in Defensive tackle Bill Rice is surrounded by Colorado State players as he tackles a CSU running back in last year's contest. Rice is returning this year as a defensive captain for the Cougars.

Gifford Nielsen and Dave Taylor pair up for this field goal attempt last year. Taylor was 13-11 in conversion attempts in field goals over the season.

CSU, Y showdown considered crucial

BYU's showdown this Saturday with Colorado State will be a crucial test for both teams. The game, set for 7:30 p.m. at Cougar Stadium, will be the unveiling of what is thought to be one of the most potent BYU offenses ever, for the hometown fans.

There is more riding on the game than is visible at first glance. People are saying the old September syndrome is setting in on the Cougars again after their disappointing 13-3 loss to Kansas State in Manhattan last week. The Cougars have been branded as late starters, and would like to shake off that reputation once and for all.

The Cats almost lost the WAC title in 1974 because of early season sluggishness. Last year's 6-5 record could have been considerably better had not they waited till the fourth game to eke out a victory.

This year's squad considers the psychological advantage of a perfect slate in league play, and cause them to consider themselves championship material when they head for Tucson and a strong Arizona team the following week.

A win in Saturday's league opener would give the Cougars the psychological advantage of a perfect slate in league play, and cause them to consider themselves championship material when they head for Tucson and a strong Arizona team the following week.

Colorado state, on the other hand, faces the exact same situation as BYU. The Rams also lost their opener, 17-3, to Oregon, and would like to begin league play with a victory. The Rams offense, like Brigham Young's, had trouble getting untracked in its first showing, and is anxious to prove it can move the pigskin.

The significance of the Colorado State-BYU tussle goes beyond the effect it will have on future league standings. For the Cougars, the clash will also be a grudge match. Since Ram head Coach Sark Arslanian took over the reins in 1973, the Cougars have not beaten them. Arslanian's first triumph as the Ram head mentor came against the Y.

The following year the Fort Collins school staged a dramatic comeback to salvage a 33-33 tie, scoring its last touchdown with only six seconds remaining in the contest.

Last year, CSU capitalized on two Cougar fumbles late in the game to hand the Cats a heartbreaking 21-17 setback on national T.V. Arslanian, who is the former Weber State head man, hopes to continue his dominance over the Cougars. Such a win on BYU's home turf would add insult to injury. The game will match a much-heralded BYU passing and running attack against a stubborn CSU defense. Returning all-WAC defensive back Keith King is the main feature in the Rams' secondary, but he and his teammates will have their hands with Gifford Nielsen's passing, talented receiving corps, rushing of Jeff Blanc and Christensen.

1,500 game tickets to go on Saturday

Student enthusiasm for the BYU-Colorado State football game Saturday at 7:30 p.m. was apparent Thursday, as all block-seating and card stunt tickets were distributed by 12 p.m. an addition 3,500 end zone passes had been handed out by the end of the day.

Another 1,500 first-come, first-served tickets will be handed out on Saturday beginning at 4:30 p.m. The gates to the stadium will open at 5:30 p.m. and students are encouraged to come early to watch the team warm up, according to Randy Smith, asst. ticket distribution chairman.

Late students who were unable to get tickets to the game Thursday afternoon "must understand that there are 10,000 student tickets," Smith said, "and when those are gone, there just aren't anymore."

"But no student will be turned away from the game," he emphasized. Students without a ticket or end-zone pass will be admitted with a current activity card and will be in the end-zone area.

There are only 10,000 student tickets, Smith said, because in previous years, except last year, not all the tickets were used, and they have been allotted accordingly.

"Through the enthusiasm of the studentbody, maybe we can show the administration we need a larger stadium," said Mark Martin, ticket distribution chairman.

Martin pointed out that students with gold south end-zone passes must use the entrance at the southeast corner of the stadium, while those with blue north end-zone passes use the northwest entrance.

"This is the first WAC game on the way to winning in the Fiesta Bowl," Smith said. He encouraged everyone to attend tonight's pep rally at 6:30 p.m. at the carillon bell tower, and wear blue and white to the game.

Four Y ruggers invited to contest

By GAYLE BARNETT
Universe Sports Writer

At least four members of BYU's rugby team have been invited to participate in the Park City Invitational Tournament Saturday at 10 a.m.

Over 30 teams have been invited to take part. They will be coming from California, Canada and as far across the nation as Missouri.

The tournament will be held all day Saturday and Sunday, "but due to BYU not participating in Sunday sports, our entire team is not accepting the invitation," BYU coach Matt Brown said.

"The Provo Rugby Club has invited some of our players to join their team for Saturday only," Brown emphasized.

One player who has been invited is halfback Hector Tahu, a recent transfer student who is here working on his doctorate in physical education.

Another BYU player who will be making the trip to Park City with the Provo club is Ken Phillips, playing the inside center position. He has played on BYU's first team for two years. Last year Ken received an award for being BYU's most improved player.

Player-coach Brown will also see action in Park City as a lineman. Last summer Brown played on the U. S. Western Rugby team. One of their opponents was an English team, played in Vail, Col.

A Samoan student who is transferring to BYU on the second block this semester, Sai Peli Manutai, will also play. He played on a championship team in Hawaii and is on pro football waivers.

There is a possibility that more BYU players will join forces with Provo, but Brown was not certain at press time if or who they would be.

Provo's first game will be played at the Park City park. "There will be rugby signs all over to direct people," Brown said. The 10 a.m. game will be against Snake River. "Snake River is co-favored to win the tournament," added Brown. They defeated the Beehive Rugby Team 14-9 in last May. Seven BYU representatives played on the Beehive team at the time.

"So far this year we have had some very outstanding intrasquad games," Brown said. "We have many new players, making about 50 men in the rugby program. We have 11 games and are anticipating an excellent season."

"Our first home game is against Provo at 11 a.m. Sept. 25. We scheduled it early in the day so that everyone, including the rugby players, can come to the rugby game and still have time to get to the football game by 1:30," Matt said. The game will be played on Haws Field.

Suns drop rookie bringing total to 5

PHOENIX (AP) — The Phoenix Suns have trimmed their rookie roster by one more, placing 6-foot-8 Paul Miller on waivers.

Miller, of Oregon State, was the National Basketball Association team's fourth-round pick in last spring's college draft.

The cutback started Tuesday with the release of 6-3 Ralph Walker of St. Mary's Calif., 6-6 Brad Warble of Eastern Illinois, 6-5 Gary Jackson of Arizona State and 6-5 Tom DeBerry of Northern Arizona University.

Cougars leading nation in defense against pass

After one game, BYU has been listed No. 1 in the nation in defense against the pass and fifth in total defense, according to a release from the NCAA.

The Cougars held the Kansas State Wildcats to just nine yards passing in their 13-3 loss in Manhattan. Quarterback Bill Swanson completed three of seven passes for that.

Listed behind the Cougars in defense were West Virginia, a spot and Northeastern Louisiana.

The nearest contender in was Arizona State, which had a game average of 23 yards against UCLA.

Tucson Toros end partnership with Oakland A's

TUCSON, Ariz. (AP) — The Tucson Toros of the Pacific Coast League no longer are affiliated with the Oakland A's, the minor league team says.

The termination ends a four-year agreement between the two baseball clubs.

Toros General Manager Dave Cartun said Wednesday negotiations are continuing with three other major league teams and that he expected a new agreement would be announced within a week.

Although he declined to name the three teams, they are believed to be the San Diego Padres, the Texas Rangers and the Milwaukee Brewers.

Cougar Day Spotlights golf, and activities designated "Cougar Day" is a unique golf event and some football game activity for the BYU student body. The event will begin at 9:30 a.m. with a golf clinic and exhibition by Johnny Miller, Mike Reasor and Mike Casper. The event will be held at 11 a.m. with an autograph session. The Cougars' first season will begin. The game will be played at one of the pro and am courses, playing in an 18-hole event. An awards ceremony is scheduled for 5:30 p.m. A total of $5,000 in money is involved, with a low professional and amateur team. About 10,000 people are expected to attend. Tickets for adults and $3 for children are available today at the Ticket Office and Saturday at the golf course. The year All-American for his pro debut in the won the Pacific Coast

Amateur this summer, was a semifinalist in the Western Amateur and was a quarterfinalist in the U.S. Amateur three weeks ago. Miller, also a BYU alumnus, was the PGA Player of the Year in 1974 and No. 1 money winner in 1975. Casper, a two-time U.S. Open champ and one of the top all-time money winners, lives in Mapleton and has been active as a recruiter and fund-raiser for BYU. Reasor, another BYU grad, is a seven-year veteran of the tour and winner of several satellite tournaments. The 1976 BYU golf team finished second nationally, included five All-Americans and had four golfers in the quarterfinals or higher of last month's U.S. Amateur. Another feature of Cougar Day will be a breakfast with the various tournament sponsors honoring John Geertsen Sr., a prominent figure in California golf circles for many years. Now retired, Geertsen was the professional at the Ft. Douglas Country Club in Salt Lake City before becoming the pro at the San Francisco Golf Club. For many years he has encouraged young golfers to get a college education and be part of a college golf program. Among the golfers he sent to BYU were Bob Lopic and Ray Leach. But the most famous is Johnny Miller.

Billy Casper drives at the 1974 Cougar Day. He is an active recruiter and fund raiser for BYU.

Helping pay tribute to Geertsen will be his son, John Jr., currently the professional at the Monterey Peninsula Country Club in California, and his grandson Greg, who brings an impressive list of credentials to BYU as a freshman this fall.

The football game at 7:30 p.m. will pit the Cougars against the Colorado State Rams. This is the first home game and first WAC contest for BYU.

First-come, first-served tickets will be available Saturday at 4:30 at the stadium. No one will be turned away from the game. When tickets are gone, end-zone passes will be handed out.

Cougar Day Schedule of Events

- 8 a.m. - VIP breakfast (sponsors, contestants) honoring John Geertsen, Sr.
- 9:30 a.m. - Golf clinic and instructional exhibition
- 11 a.m. - Driving contest
- 11:30 a.m. - Autograph session
- 12 p.m. - Press luncheon
- 1:30 p.m. - Pro-am golf tournament with pro stars and members of the BYU team, including all-Americans Mike Brannan, Jim Nelford and Jim Blair

Co-owner sells Golden Eagles Dodgers sign

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) - A co-owner of the Salt Lake Golden Eagles of the Central Hockey League, who was told he had to sell his interest in the team to avoid conflict of interest, says he sold out to his two sons and the team is no longer for sale. The development occurred late Wednesday after co-owner Wayne Acord was told by the Salt Lake County attorney's office that his position on the board of directors of the Salt Palace violated Utah's conflict of interest law as long as he was a co-owner of the team.

The Eagles play their home games at the Salt Palace.

Co-owner Art Teece also had said he was looking to sell his share of the team. "I feel committed to operate the franchise until this season is completed.

If no buyer is located by then, I will turn the franchise back to our parent club, the Cleveland Barons of the National Hockey League," Teece said before Acord sold out to his sons.

However, Gerald Kinghorn, assistant county attorney, said his office approved Acord's sale on his half interest to his sons, Bill, 33, and Dean, 29. Kinghorn said there would be no conflict of interest and Acord could be allowed to remain on the Salt Palace board.

Despite their earlier announcement to sell the team, Teece said the club was ahead of last season in sale of season tickets and said there has been interest by some to buy the team.

"We've made commitments to the league and we've sold the most season tickets of any year in history. I've already had interest shown in the franchise by possible local buyers. That interest came even before the happenings of the last day or two."

With Kinghorn's recommendation, the board voted unanimously for Acord to resign from either the Eagles or from the board. He said without one, the Salt Palace would not have contracted with the Golden Eagles. Acord had said his choice was to stay with the board. He had said he would make every effort to sell his half of the Eagles.

Teece said the club failed to make a profit the past two years, but with advance ticket sales and promotions, a $25,000 to $30,000 profit would be possible this year.

Teece also owns the Salt Lake Gulls baseball club of the Pacific Coast League.

Rhoden sub

CINCINNATI (AP) - The Los Angeles Dodgers have purchased the contract of right-handed pitcher Rick Rhoden from the Class AA farm team in Waterbury, Conn. of the Eastern League.

The move came as the Dodgers announced they are sending starter Rick Rhoden back to Los Angeles for treatment of an ailing right elbow.

Rhoden, a rookie with a 12-3 record, injured the elbow earlier this month at Montreal and missed two starts.

Sutcliffe, 20, had a 10-11 record at Waterbury with a 3.81 earned run average.

Canada wins Cup, no relaxation

(AP) - The scenario of a championship release of emotions pent up of training and competition. Bobby Clarke, thrilled to win the Canada Cup happy to see his children have just won. "and this winning and stuff doesn't get to them. They want to win coming home." Phil Esposito, saying that the Canada Cup is different from the National Hockey League Cup because, "for one thing, to start playing all over the world on Saturday. If you win the Stanley Cup, you get four weeks of relaxation."

But Danny Gare, amidst the campaign and the tired, busy players congratulating the winning first of the six-nation ice tournament. "Though I only see six shifts in the whole world, I'm happy for the

it. It's a unique thing, guys from different teams coming together for one thing: to play for their country." They made their country proud Wednesday night, using Darryl Sittler's goal at 11:33 of overtime to beat the determined Czechs 5-4 and sweep the best-of-three playoff after winning the round-robin phase of the competition. "I don't think you're ever going to see a team as great as this again," said Marcel Dionne, whose pass was converted by Sittler into the game-winning goal of the frenzied playoff-pitch contest.

As the lead see-sawed, the crowd's cries became more feverish. Clarke scored for Canada for a 3-2 lead, but Josef Augusta tied it and Marian Stastny put the Czechs ahead 4-3 seconds later. Then Bill Barber netted passes from Clarke and Reggie Leach to force the overtime in which two Team Canada goals were disallowed. "Between periods, I suggested that Dzurilla was coming out to meet us. Simply give him a shift and he's faked out," said Don Cherry, Team Canada's co-coach. Sittler put that theory into practice at 11:33 of overtime, taking a Dionne pass, faking past Dzurilla and hitting the now-empty cage from 25 feet.

OPINION—COMMENT

Brigham Young University

High voter turnout to be complimented

Across the country, a record poor voter turnout has been predicted. In Utah County, the percentage of voters who turned out for the state primaries was higher than the country as a whole and higher than its own average in other recent years.

Refreshingly, this points to a high voter turnout in the November elections for president and other national offices. Utah county voters should be congratulated for this impressive statistic (a 41.4 per cent of the registered voters).

The general authorities of the Church have repeatedly warned us of the dangers of slothfulness, particularly in voicing our opinions to those governing, and in our national effort to elect officials.

While the percentage is relatively high, it is still low. When less than half of the electorate is involved in the decision making processes of government, it is reasonable to assume that government will move in directions that will not please the entire citizenry. This same citizenry, without becoming involved in the processes, may criticize the outcome of the process. While the complaints may be caused by real problems, they achieve nothing due to lack of action on the part of the complainers.

Freedoms of the press, source secrecy upheld

The newspaper journalist of today fights an ever increasing battle of wits; particularly the public questioning a reporters ethics of doing his job, and a reporter maintaining his source.

The First Amendment of the U.S. Constitution states that "Congress shall make no law . . . abridging the freedom of speech, or of the press."

The Fifth Amendment has generally been thought of as "prohibiting government restraint on expression." The media's interpretation of this is that the "government may impose no responsibilities on them."

But realistically speaking, the constitutional provision is not to provide "protection to the press, but to freedom of the press."

When Bob Woodward and Carl Bernstein, reporters for the Washington Post, first uncovered the newspaper coverage of Watergate, their main desire was to print the truth about the Utah County residents can point with pride to their enviable voting record, and by all rights they should be proud. Even if their vote is small in relation to the mass of votes cast in the November general elections, they can still be active in the selection of their local officials. By electing local officials of their own choosing, they insure that their voice and opinion will be heard. In the process of government these citizens have provided direction and given authority to the actions of those elected.

Not only in city and county races are the benefits of a motivated electorate seen. From each congressional district a man can be chosen to voice voters' opinions in the theater of the national law makers. By being strong at the polls, voters tell the Congressmen he can dynamically represent his constituency. He knows they are behind him and he has a mandate from the people.

With the people of his district behind him, and the courage that gives him, the representative can present the concepts the people of his area wish to have triumph in national politics.

Active voting is a good indication the voters will remain active in making their views known.

Nixon administration scandals. But many critics, who consider Bernstein and Woodward infamous because of Watergate, claim that the eastern journalism forced Nixon out of office.

Journalists in the eastern United States are often considered to be the fourth branch of the government because of the powerful force they wield. But whatever the claims, this "fourth branch of government" did its job on Nixon and his cronies.

Of course another problem which always faces reporters has been the protection of informants or sources.

The Constitution states that "Congress shall make no law . . . abridging the freedom of speech, or of the press."

Yet the Supreme Court has ruled by a 5-4 vote that the sources of a reporters' information are not and cannot be held confidential.

Was Russ wheat or treason

In a five-year agreement signed last fall, the Russian Communists agreed to purchase from 6.7 to 9 million tons of U.S. wheat and corn annually. That's enough to supply every man, woman and child in Russia with 50 to 70 pounds of grain annually.

Some consider it inhumane and immoral to withhold the copious U.S. grain reserves from the masses who languish under the blighted, blundering economy of Communist Russia. But to trade with the Russians is to sustain the enemy. It is treason in its purest form.

The courts of the United States once defined treason as "the use or disposal of any property with knowledge that it is to be . . . of assistance to the enemy" or "the performance of any act . . . which will give or supply, in any way, aid and comfort to the enemies of the United States."

Are the Communists enemies or the United States? Have Americans been lulled into lethargy by the sophistry of "detente," "appeasement," "easing of tension," and "world brotherhood" that they cannot see the Communist threat for what it is?

President David O. McKay, in the April 1966, General Conference, called communism "the greatest Satanical force to peace, prosperity, and the spread of God's work among men that exists on the face of the earth."

It is, he said, "diametrically opposed to everything for which the church stands."

Their tactics may vary according to expediency from blatant terrorism to wily subversion, but their goal remains fixed. They ultimately seek, President McKay told BYU students in 1960, the destruction of capitalism, the destruction of the free agency of man, or, as Karl Marx once put it: "To dethrone God."

"I may be unchristianlike in my feeling," said President McKay a year after becoming Church President, "but I would not deal with a nation which treats another as Russia has treated America."

How long will the United States continue to sustain criminals intent on crushing them? If the United States ceased supporting the sagging Soviet economy, how long could the Reds continue to divert 12 per cent of their gross national product towards national defense?

How long could the Communist party, consisting of but one Russians, pacify hungry masses before the "doves" speak against their masters' "marshaled and disciplined" (Doctrine & Covenants 87:47)?

"No member of this Church," the First Presidency's statement in April 1966, "true to his faith, nor can any be loyal to his trust, while he encourages, or sympathizes with these false philosophies."

"For if he does," the warns, "they will prove as false."

"I GOT FORT THIRD, CARTER SECOND, AND WHO GIVES A BLEEP OUT FRONT AND GAINING."

Alone with oneself

It seems a great many Americans are finding it hard to live with themselves. In a recent Campus Education Week course, from 850 to 1,300 people came each of four days to the Wilkinson Center Ballroom at 7 a.m. to learn how to eliminate self-defeating behavior from their lives.

Self-defeating behavior, or SDB, is defined as "any behavior or habit that keeps a person from becoming the kind of person he would like to be according to Dr. Jonathan Chamberlain, a psychologist in BYU's counseling center."

This includes such behavior as procrastination, compulsive eating, lying and feelings of inferiority.

Dr. Chamberlain, who has been conducting workshops on SDB for several years attributes much of the problem to a lack of fulfillment and "challenge in the lives of many."

"We find many people not doing what they value doing. It creates frustration in their lives and tends to take the meaning out of life," Dr. Chamberlain said.

He likened the feelings that result to the situation of a trapped animal. "When you cage an animal, then it turns to focus inward and loses the capacity to be outgoing and focus outward," he observed.

Not so many years ago, survival-acquisition of food—was a reoccupation for many. If enough security was built up, then the individual could contemplate whether he had any problems coping with society.

Most Americans live today in a world of eight hour work days and at least two cars in every garage. It seems most ironic that, in a day that man has so much, he should find it so hard to live happy lives.

Perhaps it is not more convenience or more leisure time that Americans need, but something of value to work and a cultural philosophy. He is apparently lacking in the lives of many today.

Those white lines Don't mean 'safety'

Do not think for a minute that two little white lines are a security zone for pedestrians.

Provo has an ordinance requiring motorists to yield the right of way to a pedestrian entering a designated crosswalk. But to observe many motorists in the area, one would think they had never heard of such a law—much less a crosswalk.

So, the best policy is to be safe. Test oncoming cars before venturing into a crosswalk. Watch the cars and lean forward or step off the curb. See if the drivers look like they are going to stop. Under no circumstances should a student dare enter a crosswalk without first looking both ways.

Consideration should also be accorded motorists. If a pedestrian trots into in front of a car without first looking, the driver might have no choice.

Crosswalks can be safe and convenient places for both motorists and pedestrians if both pay attention and are considerate.

Of course, crime doesn't p unless you peddle story ri

Elizabeth Ray, Congressman Wayne Hays' payroll mistress, told Times magazine she "never would have gone public with her relationship with Hays if she had known it would mushroom into such a giant thing." Surely Miss Ray is not so naive as to believe that her accusations would drift by unnoticed.

Why did she publicize her escapades? Perhaps her reasoning has something to do with the simple fact that "people who write books get royalties." It is not inconsistent that anyone who is interested in her case should pay $14,000 a year would release the account for an additional

Anyone here speak farm

With the emphasis on agriculture and "country living" today, an increasing number of city folk are becoming interested in gardens, potatoes and peanuts, the land and more peanuts.

Enrollment is soaring at U.S. agricultural colleges and students are not coming from the farmlands, but from the cities.

A rural sociologist devised a test to measure the knowledge about agricultural knowledge. He called it "The Under American IQ Test." The test is multiple choice and asks such questions as: What is a Rhode Island Red, and a Rhode Red?

Y's & Wherefores

Man is the victim of many diseases. Physical diseases have made man suffer and lament. Social diseases such as poverty, bigotry, and racism have also made man "sick." Physical illnesses have been researched and in many cases causes have been found and cures effected, and so too in the case of many social afflictions. But new physical illnesses are being discovered and classified, and so are new social illnesses being found.

One such newly discovered social illness is called "pseudo-aristocracy," more commonly known as bench disease. Although bench disease affects low to medium income individuals, it is most common in higher income brackets. Its most common symptom is an insatiable need to live at high altitudes. The common sufferer feels that by living at the higher altitude the symptoms will fade away. The victims only find, however, that the higher altitudes make for a more intensified desire to live at even higher altitudes.

"Pseudo-aristocracy" doesn't hurt. As a matter of fact, it gives the sufferer a real feeling of confidence. Extreme cases suffer from acute arrogance. They lose their social consciences and loathe everything and everyone not suffering with them.

Sufferers usually band together and try to ease each other's burdens. They even have their own monthly publications with chronic articles about the most influential victims of "pseudo-aristocracy." Such publications are the result of a common side effect of bench disease known as "pat-yourself-on-the-back-itis."

No cures have yet been found for "pseudo-aristocracy," but many cases have cleared up almost overnight as the result of loss of income. Although looking down on people can cause temporary nausea, most bench disease sufferers find ways to remedy that.

One major problem has resulted from a recent epidemic. Sufferers might be finding the altitude crowding up so that higher and higher altitudes are required to "keep above the Jones." The major problem, some researchers feel, is that once everyone suffering gets to the top (and there is a top) people might start falling off.

But never fear, modern technology can solve these rising problems.

Mao, population, back service

Mao like other 'villains'

Editor, To all the bleeding hearts who once were the Hope of the Sixties, who fought so emphatically for causes failed, who quoted so fervently from "The Quotations of Chairman Mao," and who now moan over the passing of that "great" leader, I ask you:

How long before you tell me Adolf Hitler was a great humanitarian?

Really, now. To praise unrighteous men who stand for unrighteous causes is not only unrighteous, but also the epitome of hypocrisy.

Now how about some words of praise for Judas Iscariot?

Mao's death tragic?

Editor, Mao Tse-tung's greatness, hinted at by Alan Berber (in the Universe, Sept. 15, is of the variety shared by Genghis

Khan and Adolf Hitler.

Sadly, and despite Mr. Berber's optimism, no questionable economic progress, no diplomatic overtures, no and not even a Chinese invitation to American tourists can sanctify the butchering of as many as 60 million human beings. I don't fault Mao because he was not a democrat, but because he was a murderer.

Chairman Mao's death was labeled "tragic" by the President of the United States, but it was far less tragic than his rise to power.

Editor, We're shocked that the Universe staff thinks they can over to print reruns of Peanuts day after day, and get away with it. After all, Peanuts is one of the best parts of the whole paper. Population Control

Editor, I feel that Mr. Eldred Clark's letter to the Editor (Wednesday, Sept. 8, 1976) Overpopulation? No deserves a response. Contrary to Mr. Clark, I strongly believe that the world community will have to successfully tackle the population problem before the end of the present century.

Population problems throughout the world will reach critical levels in the decade of the 1970s. The world's population has topped the four billion mark. The growth rate is an alarming 1.9 per cent, and the double-time is only 36 years.

Today, population growth is a serious impediment in the lesser-developed nations whose population growth rates are from two to three times those that existed in Europe during its comparable period of development. As a group, the lesser-developed nations are growing at rates of 2.3 to 2.8 per cent and the more developed nations at 1 to 1.3 per cent.

The consequences of the world's rapid population growth are grave and far reaching. The issue is not only quantity but also quality of life. Food and population growth rates are basic considerations. Man's well being is the critical point. Included are man's relations to man, both present and yet to be born, to other living creatures, and to his environment in general.

Rapid population growth challenges development in many areas. Providing for schools, housing, health facilities, and employment opportunities become staggering when the population often doubles in 20 to 25 years.

This emerging set of concerns explains why an increasing number of people are realizing the necessity for serious discussion of population limitation. The necessity for such action is demonstrated by the yearly roll call of human births. "At the close of each year, the world now has more than 80 million more mouths to feed than it had the year before!" according to one source.

Yes, Brother Clark, the population question is exceedingly difficult and the answers are frequently unpleasant. Perhaps this is so, because as one population scholar observed, "more than any other time in human history, man is confronted with the challenge to examine his reason for living. This challenge is becoming more acute as man has possessed the power to determine the destiny of his race, crushing burden of deterring population growth."

P.S. My assertion that confronted with and serious population crisis is that I am anti-childbirth. I am pro-childbirth. I believe that every child should be born to be born to "want" a baby.
